Will any man with a grain of coramon omposition pretend that with "straight" Republican candidates and "straight" Grace Democracy candidates in nomination there would be the slightest chance of defeating Tammany? Would not the very fact of the failure of a combination against Tammany relice the supposed Grace strength 19,000 votes and the Reoublican strength 25,000 votes? Would it of at the same time add 20,000 or 30,000 votes to the Tammany strength?

A straight Republican ticket would mean a Platt-Kerwin ticket, and it is said that it would not be supported by the "best elements" of the Republican party. This is true. But suppose it only and suppose the other is per cent, supported the Grace Democratic candidate would that raise the latter to much more han half the strength of the Tammany
